

FOLDING SPORTSMAN. The warm glow of solid brass against rich wood gives these knives an almost work-of-art look. But don't be mislead. These beauties are beast of burden. Blades are of stain resistant 440-C surgical stainless steel, double-wedge ground by Gerber craftsmen, one at a time. The all-important hinge pin is milled of solid brass, not cast or cut from wire. The entire handle frame works as a one piece bolster and liner to offer uncommon strength. The blade locks firmly open and can be released only by pushing the recessed thumb latch. There's even a built-in safety "pause" to prevent snap-shut closing. Another Gerber exclusive, developed by our inventive designers. Each Folding Sportsman is made with the same attention to detail as every Gerber. Ruthlessly inspected along the way, and rejected at the slightest hint of a flaw.

Of course, words and pictures can only communicate a general impression. The most convincing sales pitch occurs when you pick up a Folding Sportsman. Regardless which size, at once you will sense the care with which the knife was built. You'll feel the precise balance, the natural way it fills your hand. You'll see how all components and surfaces align, flawlessly.

Then you'll begin to understand, and we hope, appreciate our penchant for building knives the right way.

MAGNUM FOLDING HUNTER. Here's the epitome of a true hunting knife. This brute is crafted with serious dressing and skinning chores in mind. The 3 1/4" blade is of 440-C surgical stainless steel, double wedge ground to extraordinary sharpness and tempered to a hardness of Rockwell C57-59. When opened the blade locks solidly in place and a recessed thumb latch must be depressed to close. Blade spine is ribbed at base to provide a positive grip. The solid brass frame, with its tropical hardwood inlays, features contoured finger grips for a comfortable, firm grasp even when wet. The left and balance of this rugged, handsome knife must be felt to be appreciated.
